The Only thing that Matters in Life is the Learning Curve!- From The Alumni Desk

Stagnancy is the one thing, which humans should completely avoid in any segment of life. The only thing that separates us from the rest of the ecological system's life form, is evolution. As an individual & as an employee, it is our duty to grow & evolve. What we are facing is once in a lifetime event and since it is driven by external stimulus which you can't control. The only thing which you can control, is how you wish to change your life and the willingness & curiosity to learn new things. Learning new things are like sharp arrows in your quiver in the war.

As a management employee, the basic thing one should be able to do, is analysis and proper communication knowledge throughout the complete channel of the company, are the basic necessity. There are numerous channels & platforms where analytics tools like Tableau, SAS, R, RapidMiner etc. could be learnt. Referring to one of the lectures in IIM-A- "If a person A assigns some tasks to Person B, and Person B makes a mistake, then both the parties A & B are at fault. This is because of a very simple reason, Person B did not pay enough attention and did not comprehend the given task. But Person A is at fault because it failed to communicate properly which eventually led to tasks failure. Efficiency is something which will lead you to climb the corporate ladder quickly and at the same time will make your personal life fruitful.

First and foremost, figure out your inclination towards skills which you find interesting. An Operations graduate will have different needs in terms of skill-set development compared to Finance or an HR, where their needs would be different. Everyone had 5 months of lockdown and was in their homes. In this situation, imagine the possibilities of learning & developing new skills, which would eventually help in you getting a job of your dream and excel in the job.

Better Late than never, there is always time to learn!

Focus-Focus on your career need & your short term & long time goals

Gather- Gather all the information available for your needs & goals.

Decide- Based on your judgment, Make a Decision on Skills development & Stick to it!

Learn- Put all your efforts to learn & embrace what's required.

Grow-Once you have the command on the skill set, you will eventually grow!

Cheers!
